

Practicing Invention: The police discovered Vernon Burguss dead in the Toys R' Us employee locker room on October 31st at 11:36 a.m. because of multiple stab wounds. The investigation reveals three possible reasons for the murder. The killer might have been a former colleague who wanted to punish Vernon for a workplace dispute or unpaid work or someone who fought over remaining store products. The killer used Halloween as a symbol to destroy the last remnants of childhood wonder and nostalgic feelings. The killer must have known Vernon because they attacked him multiple times in his familiar workplace.

Arranging Your Argument: The report needs to start with a brief summary of the crime and primary theory followed by a timeline of events and physical evidence collected from the scene. The report should present witness statements followed by forensic results and suspect information with supporting evidence. The report concludes by establishing the most likely perpetrator and identifying locations for additional investigation.

Stylizing Your expression: The detective uses a noir-inspired tone which combines his sharp observations with dramatic flair in his investigation. The writing style matches the spooky Halloween atmosphere while keeping the report professional and engaging for readers. The author combines scientific details with powerful descriptions to show how the crime scene presented both a heartbreaking tragedy and a meaningful symbol. The writing style creates a case file that both proves its facts and stays in readers' minds.

Memorizing the Material: The case connects to three rhetorical concepts which include exigency and genre identification and analysis. The investigation requires immediate action because a murder happened and justice needs to be served. The investigation requires immediate action because of the urgent situation which determines both the report's content and its delivery method and overall structure. The investigation requires both genre identification and analysis to succeed. The report follows standard detective case file procedures by uniting factual data with investigative storytelling methods. The investigator achieves credibility through genre recognition because it enables him to create a professional tone and structure that meets audience needs.

Deliver Your Case: A written report stands as the optimal method to present this case. The written format enables users to present evidence and analysis through an organized structure which maintains professional language. A written report enables readers to access particular details while creating a structured argument that demonstrates professional credibility through official documentation. The written format enables the investigator to express their noir-inspired voice through the narrative without visual or audio interruptions which makes it the best choice for case delivery.